EDITORIAL POLICY

Behavior Science Research emphasizes the publication of cross-cultural studies, both methodological and theoretical; annotated bibliographies of social science interest on specific areas, cultures, or topics; reports of field research methods or data concerning the cultures included in the HRAF files, particularly those cultures constituting the HRAF Probability Sample; abstracts of Ph.D. theses (250 words) or M.A. theses (100 words) using. HRAF data or computer programs; and articles based on or supportive of HRAF programs and activities. Contributions must not exceed 50 manuscript pages, and articles of 25-30 pages are preferred. Authors should submit abstracts of 50-75 words, which will automatically be considered for publication in Abstracts in Anthropology and in United States Political Science Documents. The author of any article published in this journal has the right to republish it in whole or in part without requesting permission from HRAF.
